Introduction

The Radcliffe Collection, named after its chief donor Sir Frederick Radcliffe (1861-1952), is the Anglican library of Liverpool Cathedral and St Aidan's Theological College in Birkenhead. The Collection began with Radcliffe's gift of the library of Christopher Wordsworth (1848-1938), who served as Chancellor of Lincoln Cathedral and later was a canon of Salisbury Cathedral, where he held a number of posts including that of librarian and chancellor. Wordsworth's library reflects his academic interests in historical and liturgical research as well as containing books and manuscripts that had belonged to or written by family members who held prominent positions in the Church of England, notably, Bishop of Lincoln, Bishop of Salisbury and the Bishop of St. Andrews. The Wordsworth Collection is now fully catalogued and available to search on the Liverpool Hope University Library's online catalogue [capitadiscovery.co.uk/hope/]

Primarily, the focus of the collection was to be a 'liturgical library'. Radcliffe aimed to buy exemplars of every book printed for liturgical use in England during the Tudor and Stuart reigns, both Roman Catholic and Anglican, brought together alongside medieval manuscripts to document and observe the liturgical transition during this period. Indeed the collection houses Missals dating from the pre-Reformation era, some 15th century European manuscript Books of Hours, 16th and 17th century bibles and early commentaries, hymn books and ecclesiastical music, and a large number of early printed books chiefly of liturgical and scholastic interest.

With the development of Special Collections in The Sheppard-Worlock Library in 2012, and the introduction of a British Standard vault suitably designed to house manuscripts and early printed books, the Radcliffe Collection held in the University of Liverpool's Sydney Jones Library, were moved to Liverpool Hope University. During the 1960's Mr David Cook, formerly of the Harold Cohen Library in the University of Liverpool, produced the Short-title catalogue of books printed before 1801. The generosity of Mrs Watson and Mrs Denman, daughters of Sir Frederick Radcliffe, and his grandson Mr Philip Radcliffe Evans made it possible for the original catalogue to be printed. This new Radcliffe Collection Catalogue includes the information gathered in the original short-title catalogue together with a list of the manuscripts, later additions, private presses, limited editions and the St. Aidan's early printed books.
