Participant Feedback

"[Both tutors] are both extremely approachable which makes students feel at ease. The communication between tutors and students is brilliant therefore I feel comfortable expressing my opinion and asking for support if needed. The sessions are interesting and engaging as well as providing much information about the topic to inform our assignments. The tutors go above and beyond to assist with queries. Moodle is updated on a regular basis with reading materials and information which is fantastic."

"Varied opportunities to study independently, reflect, come together and feedback. In our live Zoom sessions, I am encouraged to look through different perspectives or challenged to reflect on my own working practises."

"I am pleased with the way the Masters programme is taught. There is plenty of reading and resources on moodle and [my tutor] is always happy to help if needed. The use of the mini forum tasks has also been helpful, especially with the course being online. I have also booked support sessions to develop my writing skills further."

"The course leaders' enthusiasm for the module made me more engaged with the materials and I am now conscious of theories/concepts I did not consider before. The learning materials were useful and I have been able to apply them practically within my working environment."

Module Overview

This Postgraduate Certificate (60 Level 7 Credits) comprises two x 30 credit modules:

- Education Leadership & Management I: Perspectives on Leadership (30 Credits).
Recognising the challenges faced by those in leadership roles and the need to support the development of leadership competencies at all levels, this module explores leadership, with a specific focus on leadership within different education organisations. In particular, the module explores the nature of leadership and management through a number of different thematic 'lenses' and considers the role leaders play within improvement and change programmes.
- Education Leadership & Management II: Working Effectively with Others (30 Credits).
This module takes as its focus the need for all those working within schools and other education institutions to develop positive and productive relationships with others. Leadership and management do not occur in a vacuum, and this module has been designed to develop both functional knowledge and critical understanding of a number of key perspectives on human behaviour within organisations and on the nature and processes of organising human activity. As such it is designed not only to encourage the development of solutions to specific leadership and management problems but also to provide participants with insights into the complex nature of organisations and of organisational life.
