It will provide a critical and practical understanding of how to create learning environments and offer teaching which takes account of children's contexts and their emotional and social needs. The course also focuses on the importance of practice that is underpinned by values and informed through a critical and ethical engagement with evidence.

Course Overview

This Postgraduate Certificate (60 Level 7 Credits) comprises two x 30 credit modules:

- Module 1: Social and Emotional Learning Dimensions: Practitioner (30 Credits)

This module examines social and emotional aspects of learning. In particular, it explores how children's familial contexts, early developmental experiences and consequent attachment patterns, impact on their attitudes to learning, to relationships and to their ability to reach their educational potential.

With increased critical awareness of learning as an emotional experience and of the application of attachment theory to classroom contexts, participants will have an increased ability to respond to children's social and emotional needs as integral to their primary task.

- Module 2: Values and Evidence Informed: Practitioner (30 Credits)

This module offers students the opportunity to engage in an in-depth, critical consideration of contemporary research linked to educational improvement. Students' exploration of this knowledge-base will be informed by a critical reflection on the role of values in shaping their views about the aims and ends of education while also considering how professional experience informs their preferred "ways of teaching".

Students will develop their skills as critical consumers of research, exploring the strengths and limitations of different methodologies and considering the extent to which there can be strong and direct links between research and practice.
