

Postgraduate Certificate Early Career Teacher

Duration: 24 months | Delivery: Online

The programme draws significantly on a professional learning model that encourages students to make clear connections between relevant research, theory and their emerging professional practice.

Students will draw on their professional capabilities and extend their practice through their engagement with the assessments, which are designed to promote high levels of critical reflection on their Early Career practice and extend their understanding of the link between research evidence and practice. The two modules are designed to develop the Early Career Teacher as a reflective practitioner able to analyse their emerging practice and consider how it is informed by a critical engagement with evidence and research.

Module 1 will focus on supporting the student on their professional learning journey considering relevant theory and evidence which is applicable to their context as an Early Career Teacher. Module 2 will involve continued professional engagement through the critique and deconstruction of students practice, linked to research and evidence. These will both support their ability to critically consider educational research and evidence and support any future small-scale piece of research linked to an aspect of practice.
